I really enjoyed the Business English training with Language Link and it has helped my current job significantly. As a result, I am now able to have in-depth discussions in Business English with my colleagues in all areas related to business strategy. The tutor provided up to date and challenging materials to discuss topics in real conversation and corrected any grammatical mistakes I made as well as suggesting more natural expression for improved fluency.

On-site Business English and ESP Training

Language Link provides tailor-made on-site Business English and ESP courses which meet the client's particular business needs. Our on-site training workshops and seminars can take place at your place of work, at Language-Link's Irish head offices or in a variety of other locations around the world. These tailored training workshops and seminars cover a variety of topics including Business Communication Skills, Business Writing Skills, Cross-cultural Communication, EAP [English for Academic Purposes] and Effective Lecturing Skills. The duration and focus of each course can be adapted to satisfy the unique needs and objectives of the client.

Business Communication Skills

This course aims to provide participants with essential English language skills so they can 1) manage and actively participate in meetings; 2) engage in telephone conversations with English-speakers; 3) give clear and compelling presentations and project updates; 4) negotiate with English-speaking clients and customers and 5) write important business emails and documents. Participants will acquire an understanding of crucial business vocabulary and related grammar structures which will enhance their general comprehension of Business English while also providing them with practical language strategies, which they can use to communicate effectively in a variety of important business contexts.

Business Writing Skills

In order to communicate effectively in written English, a business person must not only possess a good understanding of the English lexicon and related syntactical structures, but he must also be able to use the appropriate lexical and syntactic structure in particular types of written business correspondence. The aim of this course is to provide participants with practical and essential writings skills that will enable them to communicate effectively in different formats so that they can achieve optimal business outcomes in English-speaking markets.

Grammar for Business

English speakers use specific grammar structures in particular business situations. English language learners must be able to both recognise and utilise these grammar structures in order to communicate effectively about business-related subjects. The aim of this course is to provide participants with an extensive understanding of the fundamental grammar structures used in Business English and to teach them how to apply these structures in a wide range of particular business contexts.

International Business Communication

Cultures provide individuals with distinct frameworks of understanding through which they interpret the world, and individuals from different cultures usually interpret the 'same world' in radically different ways. This cultural difference can result in misunderstanding which can negatively affect cross-cultural business-to-business relationships. The aim of this course is to enhance participants' sensitivity to cultural differences, to signpost the dangers of ethnocentrism and to cultivate participants' understanding of the constitutive role that context, paralanguage and non-verbal communication plays in cross-cultural business interactions.

English for Academic Purposes

EAP trains students how to adequately comprehend, assimilate and present complex information in spoken and written English and it provides them with the required language skills [listening / reading / speaking / writing] to succeed in a variety of academic contexts. In this highly interactive course, participants will develop transferable skills in listening comprehension, oral intelligibility and written expression which will help them to decode and articulate the most intricate academic concepts and arguments in an effective and economical manner.

Effective Lecturing Skills

To lecture effectively in English, a lecturer must be able to 1] contextualise, explain and critique complex information; 2] answer students' questions and provide clarifications where necessary; 3] ask questions to assess students' levels of understanding and critical engagement; 4] clearly present complex visual information; 5] correct errors and provide feedback and 6] interact with students in both formal and informal academic settings. The aim of this course is to cultivate participants' awareness of different pedagogical strategies and related grammar structures, so they can communicate their lectures effectively and help their students to achieve optimal learner outcomes.
